Thrill that brings Comfort instead of Sacrifice

THRIFT, the paramount national duty, applies to time as well as to money—to small personal outlay as well as to larger family expenditure. Applied to the daily shave, thrift means the use of a

GILLETTE SAFETY RAZOR

The Razor of National Service.

The Gillette reduces shaving time to five minutes or less—an actual saving of a week of working days a year! To the man who depends on the barber, it saves still more time, and from $25 to $50 or even more annually. This means the cost of one or several War Savings Certificates.

Moreover, there is not a man living with a beard to shave who cannot shave better with a Gillette if he will use it correctly—with the blade screwed down tight and a light Angle Stroke.

For the thousands of young men just reaching shaving age the Gillette Safety-Razor is a source of good habits—not only thrift, but punctuality, personal neatness, and efficiency in little things. For yourself or your son, at home or Overseas, it is a splendid investment.

Gillette "Bulldogs", "Aristocrats" and Standard Sets cost $5.—Pocket Editions $2.50 to $3.—Combination Sets from $8.50 up. Send for Catalogue.

Gillette Safety Razor Co. of Canada, Limited, Office and Factory: The Gillette Bldg., Montreal.

Our Sure Shield

The nation, we are convinced, is not ungrateful of the successes which have been achieved at sea. They have exceeded all expectations, for we have experienced neither invasion nor starvation. The fleet is still our "sure shield," and if the submarines piracy, owing to the license which characters it is, is proving a temporary embarrassment, it in no way reduces the enemy from the stranglehold of our sea power.—London Daily Telegraph.

Don't Be Too Sure

The Hardest Part of the War Is Yet to Come

The present situation of the war does not warrant panic. But neither does it invite optimism. The hardest, bitterest, most dangerous portion of the struggle is yet to come, and unless the United States is prepared for sacrifices as great as the British and French people have already made, Germany may yet escape that defeat which is essential to the restoration of justice and democracy in the world and vindication of international law, now threatened with permanent repeal. And if Germany escapes today, the danger for us tomorrow will be beyond price estimation. We are in a war the issue of which is still doubtful and the outcome of which will infinitely be defeat unless we are prepared to fight it as a war for our own existence, calling for our best efforts and our ultimate strength.—New York Tribune.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

Hard to Tell

Little Gertrude had been especially inquisitive all evening. Her father had answered her questions patiently, but he was becoming exasperated. Finally she said:

"What do you do at the office all day, daddy?"

"Oh, nothing," he said.

Gertrude pondered over this answer for a moment. Then she returned valiantly to the charge.

"But how do you know when you have finished?" she asked.

Bert Grey, the song writer, went to the corner market near his house in East Cleveland to buy three lamb chops for his dog Bruce.

"I don't buy chops for my husband," he said. "This is a treat for letting a gentleman I dislike." Cleveland Press.

High Heels and War

Proposed Legislation in Illinois Is Subjected to Criticism

High heels on women's shoes may give the Hun the victory. A member of the Illinois legislature, who proposes to legislate "high heels out of his state, has figured it all out. Flat feet, he reasons, are the cause of the rejection of many volunteers, who would otherwise be acceptable. Their mothers wore high-heeled shoes, and high-heeled shoes are bad for the feet, and finally bad feet have become hereditary. Therefore, the gentleman from Illinois exclaims, emotionally, "A bas with the high heel!" and practically, he says they must come down.

This looks reasonable, but there is one point we would like to have cleared. For ages and ages horses have been driven into them, but so far as we are aware, no colts ever horn with his hoofs trimmed and the nail holes ready for the blacksmith.—St. Louis Republic.

It Rubs Pain Away.—There is no liniment so efficacious in overcoming pain as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. The hand that rubs it in rubs the pain away and on this account there is no preparation that stands so high in public esteem. There is no surer pain-killer procurable, as thousands attest who have used it successfully in treating many ailments.

Exit the Gasoline Romance

"Oh, George, I can't! Since the chauffeur jilted her the poor girl can't stand the smell of it."

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator will drive worms from the system without injury to the body because its action, while fully effective, is mild.

Not Much Kick to It

"How much cider did you make this year?" inquired Farmer A.

"Farmer B. had offered him a sample for trial."

"Fifteen barrels," was the answer.

"Farmer A. took and said, 'I reckon, Sir, he'd drawn, 'if you'd had another apple you might 'ave made another barrel!'"

BABY'S OWN TABLETS OF GREAT VALUE

Mrs. J. A. Lagace, Ste. Perpetue, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets have been of great value to me and I would strongly recommend them to other mothers." Thousands of other mothers say the same thing. They have been convinced through actual use of the Tablets that nothing can equal them in regulating the bowels and stomach; driving out constipation and indigestion; breaking up colds and simple fevers; expelling worms and curing colic. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers everywhere by mail, or sent by express, by Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Can't Dodge It

Of all the foolish notions in the world the notion that you can avoid war by getting married is the foolish.

Miller's Worm Powders prove their value. They do not cause any violent disturbances in the stomach, any pain or griping, but do their work quietly and painlessly, so that the destruction of the worms is imperceptible. Yet they are thorough, and from the first dose there is improvement in the condition of the sufferer and an entire cessation of manifestations of internal trouble.

Playing Safe

We know of a fellow who is so afraid of war that he uses a whisk broom instead of a military brush.—Cortland (O.) Herald.

I fell from a building and received what the doctor called a very bad bruise on my ankle, and told me I must not walk on it for three weeks. I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and in six days I was out to work again. I think it's the best Liniment made.

ARCHIE E. LAUNDREY, Edmonton.

"Nothing to nothing," was the reply.

Victory Alone

Can Bring Peace

German Government as Treacherous as It Is Criminal

"Victory alone can bring peace," declares the Premier of France, M. Ribot. We agree with him. Peace of the sort that would allow the Prussian menace to regain its strength and start its awful atrocities all over again would leave the world in a state of uncertainty. Every nation that prizes its independence would be forced to maintain vast armies and navies against the foe of humanity. The Socialistic conference at Stockholm is a German trap. All the whispers of peace that come out of Germany and Austria are as dangerous as death-dealing poison snakes. Berlin is not to be trusted. Germany is an outlaw nation today and its government is as treacherous as it is criminal. The Hohenzollerns must be muzzled, and razed for all time. In that direction alone lies the pathway to peace. ROBERT WHITFIELD,

CROSSFIELD, Alberta, Aug. 17, 1917.

Crossfield to Have Chautauqua

A meeting was held in the Fire Hall, on Thursday evening last, when Mrs. Bryce Smith, of the Ellison and White Chautauqua Company, laid their plans before the audience for the coming winter's programme, and expressed a desire that Crossfield would entertain the company. After a lengthy discussion it was decided that the scheme be entertained, and as a guarantee of $525 had to be promised steps were taken to raise this sum. On the motion of Mr. Willis, seconded by Mr. Bradley, Messrs. Hall, Bray and Horricks were appointed to act as an organization committee, and Friday, 17th August, at 8:30 p.m., was selected for the time of the organization meeting. Upon the suggestion of Mr. Willis it was decided to ask all those who would assist to deposit a cash subscription for the purpose of covering the guarantee. In this way the guarantee will be subscribed before the contract is signed; and no one will have any liability other than his subscription. It is expected that the list of subscribers will be large, and in this way the subscription of each will be small. When all the tickets are sold the subscription will be returned to the subscriber.

General Petain, the Prepared

"At the outbreak of the war (General Petain) was a retired colonel.
"When the great German assault on Verdun was launched, in the closing days of February, 1916, General de Castelnau, at that time chief of the General Staff of the French Army, hurried to the spot.
He had been sent by General Joffre, with full power to decide whether the town was to be abandoned, or defended at all costs. General Petain, whose army was in reserve close by, was decided on as the man to defend Verdun.
"They must not pass," said General de Castelnau.
"They shall not pass," answered
General Petain.
"They did not pass."
"The German did not take Verdun because of the energy, coolness, willpower, and ability of General Petain.
For six months, night and day, he was in the breach. He saw everything. Every time that a hole was made in the wall of the defense he rushed up with fresh troops and plugged the hole. Every time the Germans stopped attacking he attacked in his turn and recaptured that day the ground lost the day before.
"One of his general orders, issued during the first fortnight of the defense of Verdun, will be famous for ever. It ended with these words:
"Courage, comrades! We'll get them!"
"General Petain after his great success at Verdun was placed in command of a group of armies, and in April, 1917, was made Chief of Staff of the Ministry of War. On May 15, 1917, General Petain was appointed Commander in Chief of all the French armies operating on the French front."
The quotations are from an enthusiastic little book entitled "Petain, the Prepared," by Edward Barle Furinton, (Fleming H. Revell Company, Toronto).
While interesting in itself, the object in publishing it just now is well expressed in the following soldier-like foreword of General Leonard Wood:
"Petain the Prepared" voices the cry which is almost as old as spoken language, the cry which has been shouted from the hillsides by thinking men for thousands of years, but too often without success, only to be remembered when in the throes of war. It is a restoration of the world-old warning "In time of peace prepare for war."
The nation which fails to take heed will pay the cost in blood and treasure.
It is a lesson we must never again forget in any one of the worlds four countries?

Buttermaking on the Farm

In Bulletin No. 53 of the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, Mr. George H.
Barr, Chief of the Dairy Division, in-descriptive form deals with the process of buttermaking from the raw milk until it is ready for the market. He points out the defects sometimes found in dairy butter and explains how they are caused.
He tells of the conditions that are necessary to produce fine-flavored cream, of advisable methods in creaming and of the use of the separator. He gives statistical tables of results of separating at different temperatures and at variations of speed.
He describes what is necessary to get rich cream and the manner in which it should be prepared for churning. He advises as to salting and working the butter, and counsel as to the wisdom of care in packing and of using parchment paper of good quality. After passing reference to the regulations regarding the branding of butter, he concludes with some suggestions as to utensils and their care, and the way to get the best results in farm dairy work. Blue prints of the plans given can be had from the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, Ottawa, and the bulletin itself can be had free, either in English or French, from the Commissioner or from the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Marconi on Submarine Menace

No decisive means has yet been found to destroy the submarine menace. Senator Marconi declared at Paris, upon his arrival from American route to Rome.
"The United States, with admirable inventive genius, will accomplish much to subvert the submarine," Marconi said.
The naval consulting board is not working vainly. While no so decisive means of combating the menace has been found,
I have seen proved means of defence becoming daily more efficacious.
"The danger from submarines is decreasing daily. It is certain that future losses will diminish and thus Germany will first feel America's weight in the great war.

Wonderful Instinct

"Talking about the intelligence of animals," said young Browne, "why I have a dog at the farm that's simply wonderful."
"I was out shooting one day when I found a large, handsome dog lying on the ground, moaning with pain. Some ruffian had shot it in the leg. I carried it home, bandaged the wound and finally cured
the poor beast."
"Some months after that I was compelled to travel on a lonely road after dark, when suddenly a ruffian, who accompanied me, began to growl warningly.
The next moment a ruffian stepped out of the bushes and put a pistol to my head."
"Ah," cried the listener. "I see thereupon the grateful dog raised the rober by the throat while you —"
"Not at all. The man robbed me

Salvaging Army Rifles

Soldiers at Verdun Wax Opulent Picking Up Guns Under Heavy Shell Fire

Early this year French troops were short of rifles and were worn out in service and many had been captured by the enemy in the battles of Charleroi, Ypres, Belgium, the battle of the Marne and along the Yser.

In the effort to make up for the lack of rifles by repairing French and German rifles left on the battlefield 1 franc (19 cents) was promised to the troops for every rifle deposited in the division headquarters. This reward brought a strange and unexpected result.

At Verdun, after the French advance, the ground churned up by the projectiles contained quantities of rifles in all conditions. Immediately the soldiers heard of the reward they swarmed over the hills and ravines and in spite of the enemy's shells collected every rifle, old and new.

Soon muddy soldiers were coming from all directions, staggering under backloads of equally muddy rifles. Some had five or six rifles, others as many as fifteen. In a few days, however, the battlefield was pretty well cleaned. Rifles became scarce and the soldiers had acquired the habit they kept finding rifles in the most unheard of places, and after a walk of several kilometers they deposited their find at division headquarters, receiving in exchange the coveted franc for each.

Money rarely earned quickly flies. So when a group of soldiers came along shouting boisterously and more or less under the influence of "pinard" their comrades said: "Here come some rifle sellers!"

Finally, rifles became scarce and began to disappear from the noses of their owners. Even the first line trenches were not sacred to the "shopping parties" and a soldier who had his rifle stolen had to go shopping likewise, for he didn't dare without a rifle. "Shopping" is the recognized way of keeping one's equipment complete. Every one does it; it is the rule this war-torn place, where everyone is dependent upon himself, yet also so dependent upon his rifle.

One company at inspection reported ten rifles stolen. Things came to such a pass that a soldier could not stir a foot without his rifle; nor would he leave it and his best friend alone in a dugout. The rifle and his rifle became inseparable.

Machine guns were added to the price list. The rifle was sold at seven days' leave, and what would not a soldier do for permission to be home seven days? These rifles really ran the gamut. Some machine guns were found in the shell holes, but this source of supply soon gave out. The machine gunners turned their attention to the reserves, and even to the guns mounted in the rear. On three occasions or three days in a water filled shell hole, the newest and best kept gun looked battle scarred and ready for the repair shop.

A rigid inspection has now made "gun shopping" less profitable to the overzealous.

In August, 1914, the French possessed 3,484,000 rifles as follows: 1886 model 2,880,000; cavalry carbines 200,000 and artillery rifles 384,000. About 180,000 rifles were decided to discontinue the construction of the 1886 model and gradually to replace the equipment with the 1907 model. By 1915 it was seen that rifles would be needed before the 1907 model could be replaced, the losses at the time totalling about 500,000. To hurry matters it was decided to transform the supply of 1874 model single shot rifles, thus avoiding the necessity of making a stock, a breach and part of a magazine. A new barrel was requested, so as to use the new model D cartridge. Neither the state nor private manufacturers could make the necessary changes in the time required, so this project fell through.

The manufacture of the 1907 model was then taken up, 45,000 per month being produced during the latter part of 1915. From 80,000 to 85,000 per month were repaired, thus placing about 125,000 rifles a month at the disposition of the army. In August, 1916, there were in reserve 200,000 repeating rifles. The territorial guard, the railway and the army with the 1874 single shot model. A new twenty-five shot per minute, detachable magazine rifle followed, further economy in rifle production.

With the Forestry Unit in France

Canadian Associated Press Correspondent Describes Mill in Old Place

Within a mile or so of the front I found a Canadian Forestry battalion at work. The noise of the circular saw mixed peculiarly with the constant thrumming of the motor. A short distance from the sawmill were remnants of buildings wrecked by enemy shells. In the mill of the Canadians ran day and night, and is rapidly eating up the neighboring woods. A thousand feet in another the average output of the mill, and it will be doing better than this very shortly, as soon as the new machinery arrives. Machinery already established bears the name of a well known firm of Canadian makers.

Timber operations within range of German guns very naturally has its own peculiar inconveniences. Of course, there is always the risk of the mill and its workers being blown to atoms by shell or by bombs from the air craft. Such dangers are part of the ordinary business of the day in the parts.

The trees with which the particular mill is dealing have been "strafed" by the Boche intermittently for some time, which brings another problem to the workers in the mill. Chunks of shell are embedded in many of the trunks and are part of the ordinary business of the day in the parts.

Every kind of which can be put to any use in the business of war. The noise of many mills is one of the fairest parts of France, into a part where the peasant even yet runs in his shirt and trousers, the sound of soldiers in khaki, reveals still more of the Canadian foresters at work. The noise of the mill is a body of assistants—Boche prisoners. The German in the French woods seems to be a constant reminder of a couple score of them engaged in "stumping". From the manner in which they haul the logs to the mill there was no reason for apprehension that any of them would drop from sheer exhaustion. The "polish" of the body of assistants—Boche prisoners.

Another long journey through the most beautiful country, and I reached a third Canadian mill. Save for the villagers the Canadians have the district pretty well to themselves, and here again they are rapidly lightening into the woods.

In these French forests the lumbermen of Canada are working among their own peculiar element. In the same manner to which they are accustomed at home, save that they are under the United States flag. The forestry battalions have left their mark on France in a double sense.

Digestibility of Cheese
By experiments on the digestibility of cheese it has been shown that much depends on the special physical characters of the food. All fat cheeses are said to be digested and absorbed with great rapidity, because the molecules of casein—the nitrogenous part of the cheese—are separated by the fat, and so the gastric juice can attack a large surface of the cheese at one time. Whether the cheese is hard or soft does not appear to influence digestion, and there is no connection between the digestibility and the percentage of water present in the cheese.

Idle Acres

Something About the Agricultural Situation in Britain

Farmers, comparatively few in number, are today the most important people in England. They have the will-being of the country, of both the army and the civil population, at their mercy; for they are the only ones who have a rod of available land, is above all else, vital to the nation's health.

Everyone knows this; but, in spite of the patent fact, farmers here, there and everywhere have elaborately a settled policy gone "on strike." They are attempting to win the sympathy of the consumer, the food controller, the board of agriculture by "downing the tiller" and "calling canny." The fact is as certain as a regular strike has been publicly called by a central association of farmers in the instances from Kelso to the World of Kent and all along the route.

What are the results in this suicidal dispute which is paralyzing the land and will, if it continues, paralyze the country? Governmental interference today will entail the utter absence of food, cheap or dear, at a later stage.

The Government, in the saving of the farmer with the farmer as the farmer with the government, will suffer later for its enforced reduction of price today.

What are we to do to straighten out the farmer? In this regular duel, which is striking a mortal blow at our national efficiency? The Government has no right to the government. They must act, and at once. It is open to them to become the government of the farmer and consumer. They have only to guarantee farmers a suitable minimum price for their crops in the next five harvests, and not an acre will be left idle.

It is a large business means heavy manuring for intensive crops, will start at once for the sake of the crops in the next year. With a sure and solid prospect in front of them farmers would not be driven to the desperate device of profiteering and tricks of evasion from maximum prices. At the same time the land must be flooded with labor, made available, and a farmer with his hand in the business can make most efficient use of very poor material if he sets profit in it.

Such action is owed by the nation to the farmer. Inquisitively it is now a longer heads. Who was wrong in the first place does not matter. We must have that the land must be tilled and well treated and the seed put in during the next two months. The reasons for this are obvious.

So much for the government. What of the farmer, and the landowner? It is a crime, a crime of high treason, an offense under the Defence of the Realm Act, not to till and sow suitable ground. Those cultivators or owners who refuse to use their opportunities to full must be liable to compulsion of some sort. The nation cannot be allowed to suffer because a man or that is lazy or prefers to sleep.

Where land is left idle, where a farmer is not using his land for food, it should be open to local councils to enforce its cultivation, even if that means temporary confiscation of land, of machinery, of outhouse or anything that is needed. There are many big country houses where the management of any farms or private estates which came under the verdict.

First aid justice to the producer, and give him every governmental assistance possible. When that is done, and then only, the nation has the right to be "stark to itself." Waste or lazy acres cannot be permitted. The instant of self-protection follows.—Mrs. McLean, London Daily Mail, Feb. 22.

No Occasion for Optimism

The Hardest Part of the World War May Be Yet to Come

The present situation of the war does not warrant panic. But neither does it invite optimism. The hardest, bitterest, most dangerous portion of the struggle is yet to come, and unless the United States is prepared for sacrifices as great as the British and French people have already made, the world will be in a perilous position. The defeat which is essential to the restoration of justice and democracy in the world is a victory of international law, now threatened with permanent repeal. And if Germany escapes this danger for us tomorrow will be beyond present calculation. We are in a war the issue of which is the life of the world. We are in a war the issue of which will infinitely be fought unless we are prepared to fight it as a war of annihilation. We are in a war the issue of which will be decided by our ultimate strength.—New York Tribune.

Why the Automobile?

Greater Interest in the Automobile Clubs Would Help to Better Conditions

During the spring and summer there is always considerable agitation regarding automobile clubs and roads. In practically every town and village in the Canadian West there is a club of some kind. The members feel that the joys of motoring are so great, that the entire motoring fraternity of his community should be cemented into a concrete body called a club, whose members are willing to bear the trials and tribulations of every other member, and whose cars are receptacles into which he may pour the trouble of motoring and likewise the joys.

Most cases this enthusiasm doesn't get very far. It sprouts, it shoots its head above the ground, but for lack of suitable nourishment it dies away. The roots however, remain and sprout into life again the following spring.

An automobile club in order to be effective, is a business institution, and it is gratifying to know that these business institutions are becoming more in the majority, and less in the minority. The purely social club for automobile owners is being supplanted by the service organization. The social clubs have become merely institutions for eating, drinking and gossiping, the real business of doing things being left to the automobile club.

The great trouble with the automobile club today is the lack of individualism. The club has formed a president, a secretary and a board of directors are elected. In most cases these become the life of the club, and their ability and popularity in their community, but an automobile club is not a business institution, it is a service organization, and the thrust the entire work of the club, it is not likely the average automobile owner in joining a motor club is likely to look at the club as a business institution.

To The Crown Prince

The Crown Prince wrote to the burgomaster of Berlin after he had reviewed some Berlin troops: "With such troops we can fetch the devil from hell." This has already been done by German troops and the devil thus brought forth has been busy drowning, maiming and children who are not engaged in the fighting and in the work of impoverishing France by laying waste her lands and buildings. But what merit is there in bringing the devil from hell? To hell he will go, and he will stay. If the Crown Prince could only let him go where the devil ought to be instead of trying to bring the devil and hell upon earth.—Hartford Courant.

Important Live Stock Work

Saskatchewan Live Stock Branch to Assist the Farmers

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars has been put at the disposal of the Live Stock Branch by the provincial government. In the year 1914, as compared with $50,000 for each of the last four years, for the purpose of buying pure bred bulls and milch cows to improve the grade of cattle in the province. It is the purpose of the government, as far as possible, to buy these animals in the province, as it is estimated that Saskatchewan bred cattle are more valuable for breeding than the imported stock, owing to the necessity for the latter becoming acclimatized.

The pure bred bulls are bought in sales and already this year there have been 90 sold to farmers on easy terms. The number supplied up to date is nearly double the number supplied in the last year of the same time, and as many as altogether last year.

The last year the Live Stock department has paid considerable attention to supplying dairy cows, and this year a number will be supplied to country districts.

A greater effort will be made to present the home bred cows from being exported to eastern provinces and across the border. In previous years the exportation has been hampered by the lack of funds for the purchase of animals, and many applications have had to be refused.

The department feels that buying the animals of Saskatchewan breed is a very important thing for the farmer. It serves two purposes. It provides a means of acquiring or increasing a live stock holding for the other. The farmer who buys a cow or a bull from the department is guaranteed that the animal is pure bred, and that it will be a good breeder.

Up to $750 worth is being supplied on payment of outline, and the balance being payable in December of 1918 and 1919, with interest at 6 per cent. Pure bred bulls are supplied on terms of one-half or one-quarter, according to their value.

United States "Sham" Army

Germany's Opinion of the Forces of Uncle Sam

In 1914 Germany ridiculed the British army as "contemptible." Today it looks as if the German would say the same thing of the American army. When the war began, Von Kluck told his imperial master, "We shall in a few days have the army of the United States at our feet." That is when the horses went up against Liege.

Europe is now shaping for the final run of the enemy from France. The famous Hindenburg said of Russia, "We will crumple up the starry flag at our leisure." The leisure is likely to last for some time. Now, that the United States army is in the trenches in Europe, it is well to place on record what the Germans expect of it.

"Not a mother in Germany will put the American soldier even to so much as a glance, let alone to frighten her naughty children. We are practically certain, as all Germans are, that the days of that wretched piece of sham fighting known as the Spanish war, when the American mountain brought forth such a ridiculous number, the United States army, though it may have assumed some of the external characteristics of the present day, has undergone practically no change for the better. Its spirit which is purely and blatantly mercenary, is the same, and this will be proved when the time comes—if it ever does—when the Yankee hordes come again forth to meet the enemy."

Germany Certain Food Will Last

Public Deciding on "Air-Tight Basis" After New Conferences

It is officially stated that at a conference between the Prussian and the heads of the various government departments, it was decided that there was complete assurance that the food supply was sufficient to enable the country to hold out for the remainder of the crop year and winter. The situation is a most satisfactory one. The conference was held under the presidency of the minister of the interior and all problems connected with the matter of public feeding were thoroughly discussed.

"PAY ROLL" TOBACCO

A BRIGHT TOBACCO OF THE FINEST QUALITY

10 CENTS PER PLUG

The Squire's Sweetheart

BY KATHARINE TYNAN

WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED

LONDON, Melbourne, and Toronto

Mrs. Bartlett knew in the wake of the crowd. She had caught sight of Miss Dolly and the man who had taken her away; and the recognition had a most extraordinary effect upon her. She stood for a second or two to recover herself, for her head had begun to swim and she felt sick and cold. Then she remembered the Squire, and all he had done for her; she had a great thing to do for him. She pushed on against the wake of the crowd.

She had no idea what she was going to do—only that something was to be done for the Squire. On the way down she had made up her mind to telegraph to him from Folkestone, and had written a message to give to someone to send for her in case time pressed. Now she had received the message in her hand, and, hardly knowing what she was doing, she dropped it on the pier. The thought of Dolly and her companion had put her thoughts in a whirling confusion out of which nothing disengaged itself but the fact that at all hazards she must not lose sight of them. She had prayed for something to do for the Squire. It had been given into her hands to do—not as she had asked for it, but in a more terrible and difficult way than she had dreamed of.

The occasion served her. The deck of the Queen was swept by the rain and the spray. The passengers hurried below as fast as they could. Mrs. Bartlett waited while Cooper handed over her Miss Molly to the care of a stewardess, then followed her below. She could hardly believe that, so easily, the thing she needed most urgently to do for her speech with Miss Dolly—was put into her hands. The rest might take care of itself. The first step of the way was clear. For the rest, God would direct her.

She brushed past Cooper as he stood looking after the retreating figures of Dolly and the stewardess, and trembled as she passed him by. She had seen him put a letter in the woman's hand. "Ah," she said to herself, "he was always one for spending money whether he had it or whether he hadn't."

Evidently the stewardess was pleased with her tip for she had taken Dolly to a private cabin; and that was all in favor of Mrs. Bartlett. Surely Heaven was on her side! She noted the number of the cabin, then she went in search of some food for herself and Miss Dolly. She had recovered the first shock of seeing Dolly and Cooper together; and she said grudgingly to herself that for the sake of the woman to tackle the situation as she had been fasting.

CHAPTER XV.

The Poison of Asps

Everybody was away at the moors or the sea; but Hilary Strangways stayed on in town in hopes of seeing Margaret South again. He knew that the operation was over, and over successfully. Mr. Langton, when he went to see him had met him with a face out of which care had been temporarily banished, saying that she had disappointed them all most happily—she being Lady South—and had stood the operation surprisingly well.

"If she could but be happy," he said, the care reassuring itself, "she might be saved for many years. She needs so little—a garden and the fields and quietness and love. The more I know of the life those poor things suffered at Margolds the more I feel that Gilbert South ought to be made to answer for it even here."

By this time no trace of animosity or doubt remained between the two men. The older had of late years been more sympathetic, though not very much was said about it after Hilary had remarked shrewdly that he had never known how much he was in love with Margaret till she had slipped out of his life.

"I've been rather a fool," he confessed. "I've always fancied I was in love with somebody or other. The last was the Squire's sweetheart—a lovely creature. By Jove, I'd really been in love with her, I believe he'd never have told his love. That's the sort the Squire is—a blooming old Don Quixote. But now—it's a case of 'When the true gods came'

I know now that I have always been in love with Margaret, and that the rest were nothing."

"Er, glad you found out in time," said the surgeon, grimly kind.

"Oh, if I hadn't, I'd have had to carry off Margaret for I couldn't have lived without her."

"She would not go."

"Oh, I suppose she would not in certain circumstances. I didn't mean it, of course. There are things one would not ask a woman one loved to do."

"Some women," Mr. Langton replied, with the same kind grimace.

Hilary stood up to go—looked about him, and was struck with a sudden thought, the same which had occurred to the Squire on his first visit here. How do you do it, sir?

"By Jove," he said, "a good many sentences of death have been spoken here. How do you do it, sir?"

"One has to do it. Very often it is a woman's sentence of death; that is hardest. It makes one reconciled to being wireless and childless. Don't think of it—fortunately there is the relief from pain and the good tidings as well."

A week later Hilary came for news. This time the caring care which underlay Mr. Langton's expression at his brightest had come, uppermost. His face was full of deep lines and shadows.

"Nothing the matter?" Hilary asked, apprehensively. He had been hoping he might be told that Margaret had consented to see him.

"No. Lady South is doing as well as we could hope."

"There is something the matter with you, sir?"

Hilary's honest eyes scanned the elder man's face, with so kind an anxiety in them that the hard suffering in Mr. Langton's expression softened.

"You are very good to be so sorry for me," he said. "It is only that Lady South has got a bee in her bonnet that she must return to her husband. I knew how it would be with her, sooner or later. It is always the way with these religious women. That scruple of hers has been coming to meet me ever since I knew it was life for her after the operation. All we have done will be undone. He will kill her. She meets all I can say with a verse of Scripture. For the present she is in our hands. As soon as she is her own woman again she will beg her husband to take her back again."

"He may refuse."

"God bless her, she sees no reason why he should refuse."

"Margaret must not go back there."

"I have an idea if her mother goes Margaret will go. You will have an opportunity of presenting your side of the question. She will not see you yet. When I asked if there was any message for you, she said I was to give you her love. She looked straight at me as she said it. I do not think that Margaret gives her love lightly."

Hilary went away, faint to be content with so much. He wanted to look at Margaret's face as she sent him her love. He could imagine the steady expression in her eyes that gave the message its significance, and his blood ran fast for the imagination. His beautiful, fair-skinned, black-haired girl with the blue, Irish eyes! She was not going back to be ill-treated by that old brute. Hilary's fortune was small. Still, the Squire was generous itself, and he loved his young cousin. He could count on the Squire's help, if only Margaret would consent to his making a home for her and her mother.

With the need of talking to the Squire about it, Hilary took the holiday he really needed and ran down to Silverdale, leaving behind the dust of September upon all things, except his body out of town, and much of the clubs closed for cleaning. He and the Squire ought to have been yachting, as they were this time last year, or shooting grouse on the moors, only that their orderly lives were out of joint.

As he left town behind him and reached the country he began to realize how fast the autumn had come. He had not realized how far the year was advanced and how the leaves were yellowing. Cold, too! There was a nip in the air and a haze over the sun. East wind—that accounted for his taking a gloomy view of things. He shivered inside his light summer clothes. Still there would be blue mornings, and he and the Squire would trudge over the stubble together after the partridges, and get up a famous appetite for their meals.

Silverdale was very quiet, now, he supposed. "What matter?" He and the Squire were always good company for each other.

At Silverthorne a disappointment awaited him. The Squire had gone up to town. They must have passed each other on the way. Not coming home till tomorrow, the servants said—and were sympathetically eager with suggestions as to how Master Hilary—

—he was always Master Hilary to the old servants—should pass the time.

Mrs. Neaurich was talking to her broker over the telephone. "Kindly buy me a hundred shares of steel at the market," she said briskly.

"Certainly, with pleasure," the broker replied, "common or preferred?"

"Preferred," replied Mrs. Neaurich, icily, "I never purchase anything common."

A carman charged with overloading his horse was asked how heavy a load he had on his truck. "About a ton," he replied, "but it was all light stuff."

Fly Poison Perils

A Recent Bulletin Contains Warning Against All Composed of Arsenic

In the war on flies there is peril in the use of arsenic poison. The press reports of poison cases are appalling, especially when one realizes that they show only a fraction of the actual number. But this fraction amounted to 100 cases in the past three years, a large percentage of which were fatal. All because people use arsenic fly paper or the arsenic poison cans to rid their homes of flies, putting this deadliest of all poisons within children's reach.

Dr. Ernest A. Sweet, passed assistant surgeon of the United States Public Health Service has this to say in a public health report bulletin, entitled "The Transmission of Disease by Flies," mention should be made merely for the purpose of condemnation of those fly poisons composed of arsenic. Fatal cases of the poisoning of children, through the use of such compounds are far too frequent, and owing to the resemblance of arsenical poisoning to summer diarrhoea and cholera infantum it is believed that the cases reported do not, by any means, comprise the total.

Arsenical fly poisons, devices must therefore be rated as extremely dangerous and should never be used, even if other measures are not at hand.

With this government warning, mothers should find other means to keep the home clear of flies. A can of arsenic fly poison, or a saucer containing the arsenic paper, carefully set on a window sill, is inviting disaster to the little ones.

Your Liver Is the Best Beauty Doctor

A dull, yellow, lifeless skin, or pimples and eruptions, are twin brothers to constipation. Bile, nature's own laxative, is getting into your blood instead of passing out of your system as it should.

This is the treatment, in successful use for 50 years—one pill daily (more only when necessary).

Colorless faces often show the absence of iron in the blood. Carter's Iron Pills will help this condition.

Burn Wood On Railway

Coal is Considered Too Costly to Use as Fuel on Engines

Owing to the continued high price of coal, the Honduras National railroad has abandoned this article as a fuel and is using wood cut along the line of the railroad.

The merits of coal and wood as fuels have been worked out carefully by this railroad, and when coal again becomes available at a price sufficiently low the use of the same will be resumed.

During the former periods of high coal prices this railroad has resorted to the use of the "corona" or "cannon" nuts as fuel, and while from a standpoint of economy and steam produced they have proved satisfactory, the intense heat generated was detrimental to the boilers.

Warts are unsightly blemishes, and corns are painful growths. Hello! War's Corn Cure will remove them.

No Danger

A few days ago a well-dressed and very charming young lady hailed a four-wheeler, there being no taxi in sight. Just as she was getting in she noticed that the horse seemed inclined to be frisky.

He was jumping about and switching his tail in a way that alarmed her. She was a little bit thingy.

So she addressed a few words to the ancient Jehu.

"I hope," she said, smiling bravely, "that you will not run away with me."

The cabby sighed mournfully.

"No, mum," he replied, "I've got a wife and seven kids at home already!"

PAINS SHARP AND STABBING

Woman Thought She Would Die. Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ogdenburg, Wis.—"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally had my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female trouble of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. E. J. Donohue, Ogdenburg, Wis.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, but with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the medicinal treatment is superseded by the medicinal properties of the good old-fashioned root and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

Ranchers' Fair and Live Stock Show

Thrilling Contests are Promised at Moose Jaw During the Fair

Thousands of dollars in prizes have been put up by the Executive of the Ranchers' Fair and Livestock Show for the great Stampede to be held at Moose Jaw during the fair, July 17th to 20th, and the handsome list of awards is attracting entries from the country and if the latter can be induced to show themselves again we will do the rest," says the Herin Lokal Amalgam. Meantime, the cowboy riders of Canada and the United States.

The plans for this year's Stampede assure a far larger and more interesting frontier celebration than last year, with a much more complete program, plans having been made for both afternoon and evening performances.

Wild horse races, cowboy relays, the thrilling bucking horse riding contests, and the most spectacular exciting of all cowboy feats, bull-dogging, in addition to the other regular Stampede features will be the headlines on the program. A number of famous cowboys have also given notice of their intention to enter, and thus add color to the celebration.

Ad. P. Day, of Medicine Hat, who has consented to take charge of the Stampede again this year, is making a special effort to secure a large supply of wild horses, horses that have never before been ridden, and has notified the executive that he expects to have a herd of all kind the day they men up and bite on the way down.

Coming as it does, directly after All Canadian Championships at Medicine Hat, the Stampede will be notable because of the galaxy of stars of the sport and saddle, the men will come to Moose Jaw from that contest.

Soldier Soldiers

Navajos and Utes are resisting registration in the United States, and are coming to go on the warpath rather than be subject to draft for war. On the other hand, about 1,000 colored men have registered willingly. The contrast is particularly striking in view of the pacifist temperament of the negro and the always hostile disposition of the Indian. The Brooklyn Eagle is of the opinion that for modern warfare the negro is a better soldier than the Indian. "He obeys orders. He is brave under heavy fire. He is loyal to the cause. A million colored men in uniform, by themselves, would be a vast non-power asset to any nation."

A Safe Pill for Suffering Women

The secluded life of women, which permits of little healthful exercise, is a fruitful cause of derangements of the stomach and liver and is accounted for the fact that the doctor is called so many of them experience. Parke's Vegetable Pills will correct irregularities of the digestive organs, restore health and vigor. The most delicate woman can use them with effect, to ease and comfort.

No More Extreme Styles

U.S. Asks Women to Do Away With the Frills

"Cut the frills in clothes," is a war edict to the fastidious from the committee of national defense. In effort to institute an economy in wool for all concerned, the U. S. government would have all men and women simply their dress.

"Sacrifice! patch pockets, flaring skirts, cuffs, unnecessary plaits and other frills," is the advice to the public issued from a conference of woolen and worsted manufacturers, with the commercial economy board of the defence council.

No effort will be made to discourage the sale of goods made up in existing styles. The board and the manufacturers believe such a move would be wasteful. The campaign will be confined to next year's output.

The threatening shortage of wool for next year is causing grave concern and the board expects its program is to be of material assistance in making up some of the deficits.

Fixing It Up

Marion was saying her prayers. "And please, God," she petitioned, "make Portland the capital of Maine."

"Why, Marion?" said her shocked mother. "What made you say that?"

Marion petted herself comfortably in the bed.

"Cause I made it that way in my examination paper," she said, "and I want it to be right."

"Remember to wash cars!" asked the garage boss.

"Sure," answered, said the seedy-looking applicant for work, "I'll clean everything but the license plates!"

The "Cowardly British"

"The German navy does not wish anything more than a new encounter with the enemy and if the latter can be induced to show themselves again we will do the rest," says the Herin Lokal Amalgam. Meantime, the cowardly British remain safely out in the North sea, and the heroic warships which made good speed from Jutland remain unchallenged masters of the Kiel canal.

STRENUOUS WORK SOON TELLS ON YOU

Business Men and Breadwinners the Victims of Nervous Exhaustion

When worry is added to overwork men suffer from the victims of nervous exhaustion—neurosis—the doctor calls it. Some have no reserve strength in their systems to bear the strain; others, overtaken, what strength they have. If you find that you are nervous and not sure of yourself, that you sleep badly, and wake up tired and aching, your nerves are out of order. Other signs are inability to take proper interest in your work, your appetite is killed; your back feels weak, and you are greatly depressed in spirits. One or more of these signs mean that you should take prompt steps to stop mischief by nourishing the nerves. The food they thrive on, namely the rich, red blood made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills have cured thousands of cases of nervous disorders, including nervous prostration, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, and other nervous diseases. Here is an example. Mr. P. H. Callan, a well known business man in Colorado, U.S.A., writes: "I am in present health, if not life itself, to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had always been a nervous man, when I came to run down in health paid little attention to it as I thought it only temporary weakness. As time passed, however, I found myself growing worse, and consulted a doctor, who said that I was not only badly run down, but that my nervous system was badly shattered. I lost flesh, my appetite was poor, I slept badly and notwithstanding the doctor's treatment grew so weak that I had to leave my business and was confined to the house. Time went on and I was steadily growing weaker, and my friends were all greatly alarmed for my condition. In this condition I was strongly recommended to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as the doctor's medicine was not helping me I decided to do so. By the time I had used three boxes I could tell that they were helping me. When I had taken eight boxes of the pills I felt able to attend to my business again, and people were surprised to see me out. I continued the use of the pills until I had taken twelve boxes, by which time I was feeling as well as ever I did, and was being congratulated by all my friends on my full restoration to health. I feel now that I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the outset I would not only have saved much money spent in doctor's bills, but would have been in better health sooner. I cannot speak too highly of this medicine, and would recommend it to every man who feels weak, nervous or run down."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

French Discover Plot

An official note issued in France says families of prisoners of war in Germany against letters purporting to come from prisoners which contain requests for parcels of food or for certain information of military character to be conveyed by means of underlining certain words, which together form phrases. Sometimes a suggested answers can be written in saliva on the inside of envelopes. The public is recommended to send these letters to the military authorities. It is said these proceedings are employed by the enemy to obtain information and food parcels for their own use.

The French ministry of war has prohibited the mailing of newspapers and magazines to neutral countries by private persons. Newspapers mailed by publishers or news companies alone will be transmitted. In addition travellers proceeding to neutral countries will no longer be allowed to take newspapers or periodicals across the frontier.

Big Land Deals

Ranches and Farms in Southern Alberta Change Hands

One of the biggest land deals which has taken place in the Taber district for some years has just been closed whereby Albert Green has disposed of his farm and sheep ranch. The farm has been sold to Mr. Coolidge for $25,000, and Mr. Coolidge has disposed of a half interest in it, to Mr. Green's sheep ranch on Chin county consists of several sections and is an ideal sheep grazing area. It has been sold to Ed. Hagerman for $84,000. This, however, does not include the sheep. The ranch is well equipped with buildings, including one of the most modern houses in the south country.

There is a great deal of hand changing hands in the Taber district. The Cameron ranch, which was put on the market last fall, is being bought up, partly by new settlers and partly by people living in the Taber district. The outside edge of the ranch on the northwest has all been disposed of to a depth of four or five sections.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Soft corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply on the corn a few drops of freestone, says a Cincinnati authority.

At little cost one can get a small bottle of freestone at any drug store, which will positively rid one's feet of every corn or callus, no matter how sore or the danger of infection. This new drug is an ether compound and dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue. Just rub it on the corn and the corn and calluses now without a bit of pain or soreness. If your druggist insists on the medicine, easily get a small bottle for you from his whole sale drug house.

Not His Name

Kathleen had been put out to service, and her mistress liked the rosy face of the young girl. One day Kathleen was sent on an errand to town. She was longer than usual and her mistress stood in the porch as she came through the field. Kathleen was happy and her mistress observed:

"Why, Kathleen, what a rosy face you have today? You look as if the dew had kissed you!" Kathleen looked down, her eyes, and murmured:

"Indeed, ma'am, but that wasn't his name!"

Canada's Fine Record

In reciting to the Canadian parliament the fact that Canada has sent 162,000 soldiers to France, Borden might also have mentioned the very notable fact that not one of those soldiers has been lost in transportation. In considering this fact it must be remembered that the torpedoing of transports is not in violation of international law, and that the Canadian troops on the ocean did not have even the uncertain protection which Germany's pledges to the United States for a time gave to transatlantic passengers.

It is to be hoped that those in charge of the transporting of American troops to France will seek the advice of those who have directed this service for Canada.

Nights of Agony come in the train of asthma. The victim cannot get down and sleep is driven from him. What grateful relief is the immediate effect of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. It banishes the frightful condition, clears the passages, and enables the afflicted to again sleep as soundly and as restfully as a child. Insist on the genuine at your nearby druggist.

Compensation Not Likely

As compensation for the torpedoing of a Spanish ship, the German government offers at the first opportunity to arrange that a fleet of German warships will pass a Spanish warship and, flying the Spanish flag, deliver a 21-gun salute. The Madrid Journal remarks (1) the occasion is too distant to arise soon; and (2) it is still a problematical matter whether Germany will have a fleet at the end of the war.

Woman Lived Twelve Years as a Man

The Toledo, Ohio, police are unfolding the mystery of "Samuel Ackerman." "Who?" who for a dozen years posed as a man—who "married" another woman and who finally ended the deceit by suicide in the Maumee river at Toledo. She apparently was 29 years of age.

While living in New York soon after coming from Russia, "Samuel Ackerman" married a New York girl and went to Toledo, where she worked as an optician.

The latter obtained a divorce over two years ago, and married. She is now Mrs. Sarah Wise and is the mother of a year-old baby.

"Ackerman's" personal effects are entirely those of a man, including a razor which appeared unused.

Extensive German Spy Plot Revealed

An extensive German spy plot, as a result of which ship sailings and other information have been revealed, was discovered by the Foreign Office at Buenos Aires.

The miscarriage of a letter intended for the head of the espionage organization led to the discovery of the plot. The letter fell into the hands of the Foreign Office. An investigation is underway to have revealed the extended organization of the espionage system.

Numerous suspects are under surveillance of the police. No arrests have yet been made, however, owing to doubt as to whether the Argentine laws make indication of penalties for such offenses possible. Despite this, it is believed the Government will find some means of suppressing the spies.
